A Bible Story and What it Taught Me

Over the past 7 years I have learned many valuable lessons from Bible school. I have learned the universe and everything in it is part of God's grand plan for all of mankind. Even things that we don't realize. I had a good and fun learning experience with classmates learning more about God by every Bible school day. I have learned many good lessons along the way, one of which, I will tell about later and how it affected me. I have learned Bible stories that show me God's omniscience and holiness. Some have directly shown me that God is all knowing. For example, when the first humans sinned, God already had a perfect plan to save all of mankind. Some have shown me that God is all powerful, like when he created the entire universe out of nothing. That is what I learned from Sunday School.

Of all the lessons I have learned in Sunday school, This story taught me to trust God in everything. The Bible story goes like this: After encountering God in the form of a burning bush, Moses traveled to Egypt and told the pharaoh to let God's people go. The pharaoh strongly refused. God had hardened the pharaoh's heart and made it so he would not let God's people go. God then sent plagues on Egypt to make the pharaoh let his people go, but also at the same time displayed his power, strength, and glory to all people. After continuously hardening and softening the pharaoh's heart, the results being ten plagues, the pharaoh decided to let God's people go out of Egypt. He did not like it, but he did not want more dangerous plagues to destroy the beautiful land he ruled over. So after the people got quickly ready, God's people had finally left the land they were enslaved in for so many years. They were free. There was only one problem: where would they now go? So God showed them the way to the promised land that he had promised long ago to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Using a pillar of fire during the night, and a pillar of cloud during the day, slowly the people of Israel started on their way to the promised land.

That being the story, this is the lesson I have learned from it. This Bible story taught me to trust God in everything that I do and to give him my whole heart. I still struggle with that a lot, but I learned that if I trust God it is always better. It personally taught me to trust God with everything and always, and this is just a story of one of them. For example, I used to really struggle in writing and I would find myself writing on the last day, and even an hour before my paper was due. I knew that I could not write it in time to submit it before it was due, and I would pray and ask God to help me. I did not think of this story back then, but recently I remembered it and it really encouraged me to trust God with everything and beyond. I hope my testimony showed you that everything with God is possible, wonderful and that you are encouraged to put your trust in only him.
